

International Partnerships

Our participants develop an international perspective not only by working in close collaboration with classmates from all over the world, but also by immersing themselves in European culture and participating in exchange programs with international partner schools. As a result, our graduates are uniquely qualified to take on positions of leadership in global business: in fact, 92% of our alumni are currently in positions of international scope.

Exchange Programs

Today, the HEC MBA Program counts over 50 prestigious academic partners within its Exchange Program. These outstanding universities are spread throughout the Americas, Europe, and the Asia–Pacific region. They include Wharton, Columbia, Kellogg, Duke, Berkeley, the London Business School and the Chinese University of Hong Kong, among many others.

The HEC Exchange Program offers inbound international students and HEC MBA participants the opportunity to participate in an enriching experience of cultural immersion. Above all, the Exchange Program is characterized by academic excellence. In addition, it allows participants to expand their international networks and enhance their cultural understanding.

Exchange students coming to HEC Paris have special requirements, and, as a result, the program has assigned an exchange coordinator to respond to their needs, including housing, health insurance, and visas. Outbound HEC exchange students should expect to spend three–to–four months on the exchange. The exchange coordinator assists you through the process, but competition for the limited exchange slots can be fierce.

Double Degree Programs

Our nine double–degree programs provide participants with the opportunity to benefit from the excellence and expertise of each partner institution. Upon completion of the program, participants join two powerful alumni networks.
